MARIO BELLINI

Living and working in his birth town of Milan, architect, urban and industrial designer Mario Bellini's illustrious international career spans more than four decades.

Celebrated by the design and art communities alike, many of Mario's creations are today part of the New York Museum of Modern Art's permanent collection.

Bellini is also renowned for his architectural creations in Europe, USA, United Arab Emirates, Japan and Australia with the National Gallery of Victoria's redesign. It was this project that led to Mario's collaboration with Schiavello, creating the NGV Bench and Table.

Bellini "considers every project a new exploration to be faced with curiosity, maximum mental openness and renewed creative energy".

A masterpiece of timeless design and exquisite craftsmanship, the NGV Bench is a collaboration between Schiavello and renowned Italian architect and industrial designer Mario Bellini.

The contemporary form and use of refined materials reflect the rich history and future of the National Gallery of Victoria. With durable foam set on a bead blast stainless steel frame, the bench is comfortable and pays homage to the NGV's culture and art.

Available as a one, two, three or four-seater, the NGV Bench is a contemporary seat for public and living spaces including waiting rooms, libraries and education settings.

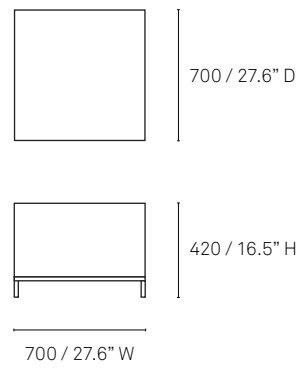

With a fabric, leather or vinyl outer, it is hand made using the finest materials. Complementing the NGV Bench, Schiavello and Mario also designed a range of occasional tables suitable for reception, breakout and lounge spaces. The table's modern spirit is reflected in its geometric stainless steel understructure that elegantly supports a slender top, resulting in a timeless design.

The tabletop is available in a 12mm veneer, acid etched glass or paint, allowing it to match the materiality and palette of any interior. Meanwhile, tables are available in a number of sizes, ranging between 400 x 400mm and 1350 x 900mm.
